Julie Kelly from Rachel's Vineyard Australia has Gone Home to the Lord

By Lairen Vogan

Julie Kelly, who worked tirelessly to spread Rachel's Vineyard throughout Australia, passed away on Thursday October 17, 2013 in St. Ives at 74 years old after battling cancer.

Julie was awarded the Papal honor of Dame of the Order of Saint Sylvester for her work and ministry to the Archdiocese of Sydney. Julie had a lifetime of service including 20 years as a State School Catechist, 8 years directing Adult Faith Formation, 12 years directing RCIA in her parish as well as being the RCIA coordinator for the Sydney Archdiocese. Also included in these ministries are Julie's many years working with Rachel's Vineyard. "By far the most important and significant ministry of my life has been introducing Rachel's Vineyard here to Australia after my own life-changing retreat experience in Seattle in February of 2000," Julie reflected back in 2009.

Julie had a special connection with Rachel's Vineyard and felt called to spread the ministry in her home country. She said, "I first knew about Rachel's Vineyard retreats when I heard about it from a Rachel's Vineyard priest who was visiting here from Seattle. When he told me about how beautiful the retreats were, I decided then and there to travel to Seattle and find peace and healing for myself, more than 40 years after losing my first conceived child to abortion. After that weekend, I knew I had to bring this beautiful ministry home to Australia and get it started here."

Thanks to Julie's conviction and hard work there are currently 7 Rachel's Vineyard retreat sites in Australia. Rachel's Vineyard is now available in every capital city across Australia. The first retreat in Australia was held in Sydney in November of 2000. Julie humbly shared that she couldn't have done it on her own, "It is and always has been a team effort. The Rachel's Vineyard team in Sydney has been so blessed with the most amazing, committed, skillful people over these years," she continued, "they will continue on with every bit as much energy and dedication as we have ever had, taking this beautiful ministry into the second decade of the 21st Century!"

Our prayers and well wishes are with her and her family during this hard time. We also thank Julie for her many years of service to the Church and specifically to Rachel's Vineyard Ministries!

The following are tributes to Julie Kelly from Rachel's Vineyard Facilitators and Team members from around the world:

Theresa Burke Ph.d., Founder of Rachel's Vineyard Ministries, shares: "Julie was certainly a Grand Dame! Those of us who knew and loved Julie all shared such intimate and honest friendships! Over the years we watched her soul expand into greatness as she embarked on such amazing work spreading Rachel's Vineyard down under. She was always a huge emotional support to me and helped me problem solve over a number of important ministry issues. I have so many fond memories of her gentle smile, her laughter, her organizational skills and motherly warmth – planning leadership conferences with her and afterwards walking through the Australian Bush as Mike pointed out all the Oz creatures and vegetation. Watching parrots out her kitchen window as we drank coffee all morning. She was one of the first people who came from far away and then bought the ministry back to her country – starting from scratch! Her anxiety and fears and the overt criticism of others made her work even harder and gather the friends and resources to stand by her side in solidarity and get retreats going for women and men in Australia and Tasmania, Singapore and even South Africa! She put her heart and soul into everything she did – and shared her heart and soul with anyone who needed her.

Julie Kelly will be sadly missed – and doing much for us all from heaven!

I send my love and condolences to all those who knew and loved her and whose lives she touched. I know many precious babies are greeting her now with gratitude!"

Anne Neville, Rachel's Vineyard, Melbourne, Australia reflects, "Julie will certainly be missed by all of us but she leaves behind a wonderful legacy in Rachel's Vineyard. I first met Julie when I was newly drawn to this wonderful program - I went interstate to a presentation she was doing for one of our Australian pro-life services. It was through Julie that I was able to look at my own loss of a baby many years before - she was so gentle and encouraged me to just go where God led me and trust in him to reveal to me the truth of my loss.

We spoke just 2 weeks ago and we found ourselves talking about this particular meeting. Thank God I had that time and I was able to thank her for her part in my life and her support in establishing RV in Melbourne. She was a beautiful lady and I'll never forget those beautiful sparkling blue eyes, her warmth and her sense of humor.

I think she'll be dancing with the angels."

Celia Ryan, Rachel's Vineyard Calgary, Alberta, Canada shares, "Julie was quietly effective in so many ways and a truly humble human being. She wrote beautiful poetry and took super nature photographs to complement them - and was always so positive even in the midst of a great deal of pain. I last spoke on Skype with her in June and she told a typical story of when the family was young and they would go on long hikes - at the end of the day she would cheer the kids on by saying "let's run the rest of the way" and they would get new energy. Well.... she told me she was working on sharing her life story titled, yep "Let's Run the Rest of the Way!" Don't you love it? That's our Julie!

Back when Rachel's Vineyard was with another pro life agency we had a conference in New Orleans (this was before Katrina) and Julie was there with 2 priests, one from Oz and one from Seattle. There was a pool on the rooftop and she invited me to swim in the evening with her friends so I got into the pool and then the 3 of them got in the hot tub - being British in my past life I was a bit shy and didn't know the men but after a while she insisted I join them. Still a bit quiet I finally couldn't help but laugh out loud and she asked - what? I said "this is the first time I have been in hot water with two priests!" they all loved it and laughed like crazy especially Julie. She reminded me of that story every time we talked!

Funny how such a brief connection can have such a profound and lasting impression - I like to thank Rachel's Vineyard for bringing her into my life. She will be sorely missed but surely she is beaming down from heaven and sending grace and blessings to all in the Vineyard to persevere with the work! She will be a wonderful Grandma to all the children she has helped to claim over the years.... good night, God Bless Dear Julie :))"

Lee Anne, Rachel's Vineyard Washington, contributes, I am smiling at the pool/hot tub incident and love the picture of it all.

Dame Julie's book title "Let's Run the Rest of the Way" will be in my heart as I remember her with fondness, even though I was never privileged to meet her. I can well imagine all the little ones who have gone before us running to meet her to thank her for the years of her dedication to their mothers and fathers through RV. Let's continue to run with Dame Julie as our coach! God Bless Susan Swander, Rachel's Vineyard Oregon, says, Julie was a wonderful lady. I had the good fortune to spend a few days with her (and others) in Colorado back in 2004. She did so much for Rachel's Vineyard in Australia. God's blessings to her family.

Anne Arthur, Rachel's Vineyard, Germany, shares, "May her soul rest in peace and may she find great joy in the arms of our Saviour whom she served so well."

Anne Sherston, Rachel's Vineyard Tasmania, Australia, reflects, "Julie touched so many lives in Australia so we have a lot to be grateful for having Julie in our lives. Julie was always such a positive and beautiful person. Julie and I knew each other long before Rachel's Vineyard came into existence in Australia. I remember when I attended my first retreat with her as the facilitator in Sydney she just hugged me so tight that she wouldn't let me go. She was the one who encouraged me to bring RV to Tasmania and so I did. I just hope I do her beautiful work justice.

We love you Julie xxxx"

Promotion in the Vineyard

Catholic Charities of Oregon is very excited to share with you our new video promoting the sanctity of life which will be used in our Project Rachel and Rachel's Vineyard Retreats work here in Oregon.

To reach more women and men who are carrying a burden of guilt and sadness about their abortion experience, we have made a new video. It features the compelling stories of former clients talking about their journey to renewal and freedom from suffering through benefiting from our healing ministry.

Their stories are told in their own words and are deeply moving but also inspire great hope. It is our aim to bring our work to the largest audience possible so that those who are still in pain can be given the chance to lay down their burden.

We hope that you will find this video interesting and we encourage you to share it as widely as you wish.

Two Time-Tested Programs Offer Unique Benefits to Those Suffering After Abortion Loss

By: Kevin Burke

Synergy: The interaction or cooperation of two or more organizations, substances, or other agents to produce a combined effect greater than the sum of their separate effects.

For approaching 20 years Rachel's Vineyard (RV) and Forgiven and Set Free (F&SF) have proven to be very effective programs for those suffering after abortion loss. Rachel's Vineyard features an intensive weekend program offered Friday evening to Sunday afternoon and is offered in a Catholic and Interdenominational version. F&SF is an Interdenominational program presented in an 11 week bible study format.

Patricia Pulliam is involved in both abortion recovery programs as well as a Pregnancy Resource Center. I asked Patricia to share her experience in ministry using both RV and F&SF, and how both models can provide a blessed synergy for those suffering after abortion:

One Mother's Journey to Forgiveness in Christ After Abortion: A Rachel's Vineyard story.

By Brice Griffin

Many years had passed, and I had confessed many sins, before I finally heard a homily by Father Larry Richards that discussed the true blessing of the sacrament of Confession. At the end of the CD, he went through an examination of conscience. I nearly froze in my steps when he said, "If you've had an abortion, confess it—your baby in Heaven is praying for you." My eyes immediately filled with tears as I went straight home to make a list of things I needed to discuss with my priest.

Chest heaving with sobs in the confessional; I told Father Roux that I had had an abortion 12 years earlier. He smiled kindly, held out a box of tissues, and assured me that the sin would be absolved. However it was clear that I needed more than absolution—I needed healing. Father Roux told me about Rachel's Vineyard, a ministry devoted to helping counsel women who suffer from Post Abortion Syndrome. Did you even know there was a name for what we feel? Because I had no idea, and learning about Rachel's Vineyard, coupled with the fact that clearly there were enough women suffering silently with me, and seemed to lift an enormous burden.

I went home to research Rachel's Vineyard, and sent a couple of emails to the contacts listed on the website. I slowly started to discuss my experience more openly with my husband. I also became involved in a letter-writing campaign asking corporations to quit supporting Planned Parenthood, America's largest provider of abortions. Eventually I felt like I had come a long way and that maybe I didn't need to attend a Rachel's Vineyard retreat after all.

Practically out of the blue one day, I received an email from the Catholic News Herald asking if they could publish a piece about my efforts to defund Planned Parenthood. I hesitated, wondering if I wanted to wear that scarlet "A", but ultimately decided that if nothing else, maybe I could recruit more people to my letter-writing campaign. Not long after the article ran in January, I received an email from a complete stranger who also attends the same parish as me and my family. She said that she had suffered silently for years from abortion and wondered if we could meet. My heart lurched. While I was thrilled at the opportunity to help someone, I felt enormously unqualified to do so. When we finally met (and wept), we had decided that we would attend a retreat together. We looked at dates, and decided that sooner was better than later, so we would attend the very next retreat available—a weekend in February in the Savannah diocese.

Knowing myself, I feared that I would get cold feet and cancel at the last minute, so I booked a flight from Charlotte to Savannah. I encouraged my new friend to do the same, but she decided it was best that she drive. In another attempt to keep myself honest, I told Father Roux that I was planning to attend a retreat (nearly a year and a half after his recommendation) so that if he saw me in Mass that weekend it would be obvious that I was too scared to go.

As the date neared, I became more and more hesitant to go. Eventually my friend told me that she didn't feel ready to re-open her wounds by attending a retreat. My initial reaction was, "well if she's not going, I'm not going! I only registered to help HER!" How very naïve of me! Finally it was time for me to pack up and head to Savannah. My Mom came to my house to take care of my young son, and asked me how I was holding up. I couldn't control the tears that came in reply to her question. I hadn't packed and was already considering holing up in some hotel in Savannah and just resting alone for the entire weekend. But I slowly packed and after much distraction, we left for the airport. I have never spent so much time in the security check point! This was when I was resigned to the fact that I would never arrive at my retreat. But I wasn't upset. I thought about renting a car and going to Savannah, and I also thought about checking into the Ritz uptown and just taking a break from real life for a couple of days. When I finally got through security, the gate for my flight was closed. As I ran to the counter, the US Airways employee looked at me and said, "Rebecca Griffin?" I was so embarrassed at being so late and somehow he was able to ask the crew to wait for me. Just when I thought I was off the hook!

I boarded the plane and immediately saw the one vacant seat, which wasn't mine. I had gone online the night before and paid the extra eight dollars to have a "premium" (or window) seat. But there was an enormous man in the seat I'd paid for. So I asked, "Are you 3B?" To which he said, "No." The stewardess told me to "just sit down" because we were ready to take off. So I looked at the man and said, "I paid extra for that seat, which is why I asked!" He couldn't care less, and I was fuming. Over eight dollars. This really is not who I am. (Fortunately I was able to go to Confession during the retreat and the Priest and I had a good laugh over my ridiculous behavior.) But this is how uncomfortable I was about making myself vulnerable in front of a group of strangers about the most disgusting experience of my entire life. I absolutely did not want to go. I tried to read "Forbidden Grief" on the plane, but it was too excruciating, so instead I prayed. I prayed for the man in my seat. I prayed for my aborted child. I prayed for all of the women who might attend the retreat with me. I prayed for women who have been through abortion and don't know that there is healing available to them. I prayed for every person I could think of, and finally I landed.

Picking up my rental car, the gentleman behind the counter asked where I was heading. I told him, and he said, "Chicken country!" Yeah, that's what I needed to convince me to go... I was still thinking about a weekend alone in Savannah but decided to trudge forward. On the road, I reached into my purse for my sunglasses and found that one of the hinges had come undone, rendering them useless. Of course. I hadn't printed an itinerary, so not only was I unsure of where to go, I also didn't know what time to get there. Of course. I called the only contact number I had and went straight to voice mail. Of course. So I pulled over and had lunch. The chicken was delicious, and I figured, "Of course! I'm in chicken country!" Ugh.

I drove through a couple of very humble towns, still unsure of any landmarks and very sure that I was going the wrong way. When I finally spotted the balloons on the fence that would indicate where I needed to be, I thought I wanted to vomit. My head was killing me. I wanted a posh bed, a bubble bath and a glass of wine. But I found a sweet smiling woman on the porch. I felt like once she spotted me, I couldn't turn back. I thank God for her.

The team was still preparing for everyone to arrive; I was a couple of hours early. Fortunately that meant I could attend Mass on Friday afternoon. I waited silently in the chapel. The priest walked by and said hello, and asked how I was doing. Involuntarily my eyes turned into waterfalls. He smiled and said, "I know. But you'll feel better soon. I promise." I think I cried from my arrival at 4 pm until I went to bed at 11:00. I read the packed schedule thinking that this was immature and that I still might sneak away, but with each exercise I actually felt a little bit better.

The first night, after we had been very well fed, we had our first "Living Scripture" experience. I must admit that when I saw this on the schedule I thought it was nothing less than stupid. Except that it revolved around my favorite piece of scripture: John 8:1-11. "Has no one here condemned you?" "No one, Lord." "Neither do I condemn you." This was such a revelation for me: of course none of these women would judge me for having an abortion! We were all there to find forgiveness and healing, and none of us would dare judge another one of us. This opened the flood gates and I was finally free to discuss my experience, along with the guilt and shame and regret, with a group who wouldn't even consider passing judgment. Thank you, Lord!

We were up and going early on Saturday, which is not normal for me. My husband gets up with our children on Saturdays so that I can sleep. When my alarm went off at 6:30, I was startled, but I was also pleasantly surprised at how rested I felt. This might not be so bad. When I walked into the dining room, everyone commented on the "New Brice." They told me I was not the Brice that was there the night before—bitter, arms crossed, weeping (again, this is not me!). I was a smiling Brice. It was a good start. I felt better already.

Saturday was our opportunity to "tell our story." Never in my life had I had the opportunity to do this. Why would I? From my parents' (nasty) divorce when I was five to my present day, it all fell into place. Listening to the stories of all of the other participants (two men included), there was one common thread: each of us came from a broken home.

While I dare not share another woman's abortion experience, I will share mine. I do not blame them in any way, but my parents divorced when I was five. It was ugly. Custody battles ensued. If I disagreed with whoever I lived with, I would threaten them with moving in with the other. Once the hormones kicked in, I spent several years seeking attention wherever I could get it. Tattoos, booze, boys, bands, whatever. I had no spiritual foundation and certainly no respect for the sanctity of life. So when I found myself knocked up by my rock star boyfriend, I didn't even flinch when he said, "Well let's take care of it." Phew. Of course that's what we would do. Because he said so. I mean, who else would I turn to? I was young and impressionable and I had the CHOICE to do whatever I wanted.

On Sunday we had a lovely memorial service for our lost children. After naming them, we had the opportunity to write them a letter to tell them anything we might be feeling. Everyone apologized to their child. Everyone begged for forgiveness. Everyone wept.

While I now feel a great sense of peace and healing, in retrospect I am stunned. Disgusted that no one ever told me that there was a child in my womb. Dumbfounded that the abortionist actually made small talk with me (his daughter liked the same bands as me and was going to see our favorite that very night). THE ABORTIONIST WAS THE FATHER OF A GIRL. This kills me today. I pray that she never became pregnant unexpectedly and he aborted his own grandchild. I am horrified that the pro-abortion movement does not acknowledge the damage done to a woman (or a man) when they go through an abortion.

Nothing in this world could ever make me feel like I made the right decision. But attending a Rachel's Vineyard retreat helped me to realize so many things: I am not alone; God forgives me because I have contrition; and most importantly, my child forgives me. My little boy is waiting for the moment when I can hold him in my arms and tell him about all of his siblings, and how much we love him, and how I have missed him. Rachel's Vineyard has given me so much more than healing. It has given me an ability that I never had before, to be able to vocalize exactly why I am adamantly pro-life and why I will raise my kids to be the same. I would never wish this experience upon anyone, and I want the world to understand that there is no such thing as an unwanted child.

Leaving the retreat on Sunday, I was a new woman. Finally, after 13 years, I had closure. I had peace. I felt that my God and my child had forgiven me. I had ten new friends, all of whom had suffered what I had suffered—some of them multiple times—and all of whom were now on the road to recovery.

Not a day passes that I don't think about my abortion and about how my life would have been different if I had made the other decision. And now, thankfully, not a day goes by when I don't thank God for Rachel's Vineyard.

Message from Pastoral Director

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

My recent visit to Sioux City, Iowa, and Janet Morana's recent visit to New Zealand, showed both of us yet more evidence of what we already well know, namely, that the work of Rachel's Vineyard is needed and loved across the country and around the world!

Long after legal abortion ends -- and have no doubt, we will see it end -- the work of healing will continue. But in this interim period when we are simultaneously fighting to stop abortion and to heal its wounds, we know that the very process of healing -- and even the invitation to healing -- also saves the lives of unborn children.

This is true for many reasons. The existence of healing raises awareness of the wounds, which in turn deters some people from having abortions. Moreover, a healed woman and man are less likely to resort to another abortion. Also, a healed heart also becomes a heart that, as John Paul II wrote in The Gospel of Life, becomes among the most eloquent defenders of everyone's right to life.

Healing after abortion and stopping abortion are integrally connected. Let us rejoice that we have been called to do both!

Sincerely,

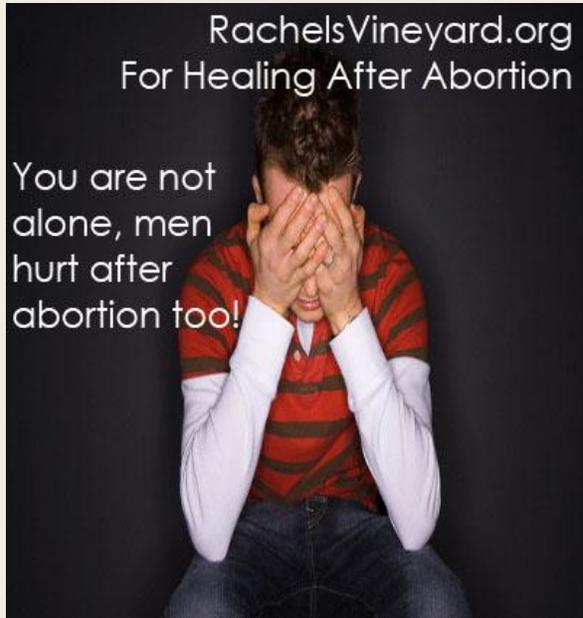

Fr. Frank Pavone
