Priests for Life National Director Offers Courses for Catholic Online school

Priests for Life National Director Frank Pavone has released a course for Catholic Online's free Catholic school found at www.CatholicOnline.School.

The school asked the prominent pro-life leader to contribute a series of courses on abortion and the pro-life movement. The first course, Abortion and Scripture, centers on biblical themes that strengthen believers' commitment to protect the unborn. Each of the six lessons includes written materials and video links and there's even a quiz for each session.

A second course Pavone is working on will dig into the spirituality of the pro-life cause.

Enrollment is free and students can work independently and at their own pace.

The course is part of Catholic Online Founder Deacon Keith Fournier's vision to provide a free Catholic education to anyone who is interested. The school offers curricula for grades one through eight, high school, adults and those new to the faith.

Pro-lifers score a victory in Beverly Hills

Pro-lifers in California have succeeded in keeping an all-trimester abortion business from opening in Beverly Hills.

Tasha Baker, who created the website StopDupontClinic.org, and the group Survivors of the Abortion Holocaust, are credited with the turn of fortune for the abortion seller, which also operates a DuPont abortion facility in Washington, D.C.

Bryan Kemper, coordinator of street activism for Priests for Life, was with Survivors from July 27-31 as they continued a monthlong campaign against DuPont, which had been planning to open in the fall. Priests for Life has partnered in many ways with Survivors since their inception.

"This is a great victory for life and I'm very excited to be sharing this moment with Survivors and other pro-lifers here in California," Kemper said. "State officials want California to be an abortion destination but not everyone in the state feels that way. I am thankful that Beverly Hills is one step closer to being abortion free."

Priests for Life National Director Frank Pavone said successes like this one can be replicated all over the state.

"This is a good reminder for Gov. Gavin Newsom that the state does not belong to him, it belongs to the people," Pavone said. "There are so many dedicated pro-life activists in the state, and all of them should be energized by this victory in Beverly Hills."

Tell the Democrats what you think of their 'principles!'

Over the summer, abortion-loving Democrats who insist on calling themselves Catholic released a "statement of principles" to, in their deluded words, "defend a woman's right to access abortion."

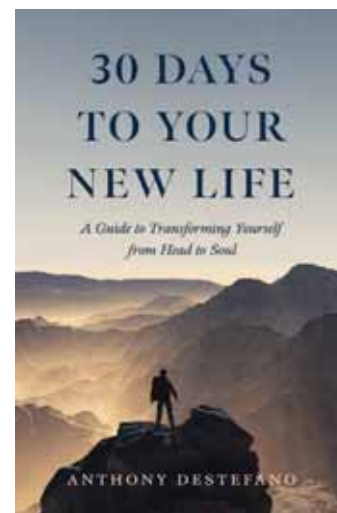

Priests for Life National Director Frank Pavone pointed out that, "As usual, the Democrats who signed the letter that calls for 'protecting the least among us,' apparently don't recognize the deceptive hypocrisy in their words, nor do they have the courage to tell the American people what an abortion is.

"We need to challenge Rep. Rosa DeLauro, who organized this letter and others like it in the past, Rep. Nancy Pelosi and all the others who signed on to it, to recognize that the least among us are the children in the womb. When elected officials fail to protect them, they betray the very meaning of public service, as well as their own humanity."

Pavone urged all pro-life Americans to sign a statement in response, found at ProtectTheUnborn.org. He also urged lawmakers and their constituents to visit LookAtAbortion.org and then decide whether they can muster the honesty describe what they defend.

New self-help book puts God at the center of a 30-day program

You can help Priests for Life through your purchase of our Vice Chairman's books. Anthony DeStefano has been working with us on pro-life activities since I was first ordained, and began working fulltime for Priests for Life in 1996. We are happy to offer his latest publication.

Many self-help books have been written on the subject of attaining happiness, but one important ingredient always seems to be missing: God.

But God is at the center of best-selling author Anthony DeStefano's new book, 30 Days to Your New Life: A Guide to Transforming Yourself from Head to Soul. In this no-nonsense, hard-hitting book, DeStefano bridges the gap between personal development programs and Christian/Catholic spirituality, providing a motivational guide to living life to its fullest – and holiest.

One, the “Road to Majority” conference organized by Ralph Reed and the Faith and Freedom Coalition, took place in Washington, DC on June 23-24, and the other, the Turning Point USA Action Conference, took place in West Palm Beach, FL on July 15-16.

The commitment to end abortion and to vigorously support pro-life efforts as a priority was palpable at both events, and reflected in the warm welcome that my presence and remarks received.

At both conferences, major Presidential candidates were invited, and a variety of these candidates showed up and shared their vision for America, including the protection of the right to life. President Donald J. Trump was the key speaker at both events. He thanked our movement for its work (including a shout out to me and Alveda King), and his joy at having been so instrumental in reversing Roe v. Wade was palpable.

We as a movement need to tap into the dynamics of the current revival in American politics, marked by

- A reframing of our national divide as a battle between good and evil. More and more politicians, candidates, conservative commentators, authors, and ordinary American citizens are saying explicitly that we are in a battle between good and evil. It is unprecedented in its scope and intensity. When confronted with the accelerated push for unlimited abortion, the sexualization and indoctrination of our children, and the weaponization of our government against pro-life people and any political opponents of the Left, Americans are realizing that we are in a spiritual battle that is manifesting itself as a political battle.

This is one of the insights that the pro-life movement has always insisted on.

- An explicit reference to the “Deep State” and a commitment to defeat it. We have often wondered in the pro-life movement why the election of “pro-life” candidates often has not yielded the fruit it promised. Now, we are learning more clearly than ever that the problem is rooted in the opposition of political bureaucrats whose careers in the federal agencies span multiple presidential administrations and who, rather than implementing the will of the people as expressed in that administration’s priorities, advance their own agendas instead.

Many of these people reject faith and in fact reject America. Now it is time to reject them, and to make sure that those elected to government are in fact the ones who run the government.

Only then will we see the kind of pro-life progress we need.

- A commitment to fight as never before. The pro-life movement knows what it means to fight for the unborn and for their rights, to speak truth to power, to create and sustain a movement that is willing to be “on the outs” with the establishment, the elite, and “polite society,” and to be willing to suffer ridicule, rejection, loss of one’s job, and even imprisonment. We have been tired for a long time of politicians (and clergy) who beat around the bush, or take half-measures, or are more interested in gaining the approval of voters than the approval of God.

And now we see these attitudes taking center stage in American politics, as a new wave of candidates and office-holders, following the example President Trump has given, wholeheartedly reject political correctness or allegiance to the establishment, and want to do what is right for the American people, born and unborn, no matter what the cost.

Praise for Our Work

“Father Frank.. Most political pundits/commentators seem slick to me. You are about the only one I can stomach anymore and I’m not even Catholic. I think it’s because you have an over-arching mission that pre-dates and transcends the media. It even transcends your calling to be a priest. .. I watch you, because like I said, ending abortion is the thread that runs through everything that you do. It’s not about celebrity status with you. You say the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. You cover the news with prayer. .. And you have THE BEST live chat community on YouTube. Most of the time, I go to bed when your show goes off.” – B.F.
